

EMERGING DIVERSITY IN TRADE REMEDY SYSTEMS: CASE IN EAST ASIAN FTAs

DUKGEUN AHN

ABSTRACT

East Asian countries, typically major targets of anti-dumping actions, began to modify the WTO trade remedy systems through FTA negotiations. Although the content and degree of those modified trade remedy systems might not be significant yet, they still set very important precedents or “seeds” for “rule diversification” in the world trading system. In that regard, the trade remedy system to be adopted in the Korea-Japan FTA negotiation would play a substantial role in future developments of the world trading system.